

FINLAND MAY DECLARE WAR ANY MOMENT

DECLARATION OF WAR BY FINLAND AGAINST ENTENTE NATIONS EXPECTED AT ANY HOUR—GERMANS ASSISTED, NEB FINNISH GOVERNMENT.

INFLUENCE IS STRONG

German Influence in Finland Has Been Predominant and Finns Have Been Urged to Assist Germany.

Stockholm, July 5.—A declaration of war by Finland against the entente nations is expected at any hour.

Germany assisted the present Finnish government to establish by sending to Finland German troops with whose aid the Red Guard, which was endeavoring to establish a resume of the Bolshevik type was defeated.

Hun Infantry Strong.

German influence has since been predominant in Finland and there have been encouraging reports for the Finnish government to extend its activity toward the Murmansk coast, where runs the Mourmansk railway from the sea coast of Kola, built to give the allies another inlet into Russia.

Entente forces including American marines have been guarding this railroad and supplies at the port.

Large Force.

Reports from Stockholm on July 3, declared Germany had landed large additional military forces on the Finnish coast, these troops being well supplied with artillery and full equipment for service in cold regions.

Aviators Active.

With American forces on the front, the American aviators on this front are reported this morning to have brought down two German airplanes. In a small patrol encounter last night two German planes were shot down and another of the enemy killed by American detachments. This skirmish developed so fast that another new German division is now opposing the Americans in this sector.

Counter Attack.

London, July 5.—The Germans last night delivered a counter attack on the new position gained by the British on the Western front to the east of the village of Hamel, the war office announced today. The enemy had been repulsed in this attempt and left prisoners in the British hands.

French Active.

Paris, July 5.—French patrol parties were active in many sectors of the front from Flanders to Lorraine according to today's war office report. Prisoners were taken by raiding the detachment.

STILL NIBBLING.

Through the successful and successive thrusts in the past ten days or more the allies on the Western front have taken the Germans positions which would have been very useful in future operations. Whether the policy of nibbling is holding back a renewal of heavy enemy attack is not known but there can be no doubt that by pushing the Germans out of locally important positions here and there, General Foch is giving the German command some inkling to consider seriously as to the effect on German morale. The number of prisoners taken in the past week is nearly 6,000. Almost without exception Berlin has declared official times the French thrust north of Amiens was broken up in the front line while it describes thrusts on the flanks as "patrol attacks" which were frustrated.

American Soldiers Awarded Crosses for Gallantry in Action

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

With American Army in France, July 5.—For capturing a German gun and its crew single handed, Private John Kurowski, has been awarded the distinguished service cross. In appraising him of the award General Pershing wrote him as follows:

"I have just heard of your splendid conduct on June 6 when you alone charged a gun and captured its crew together with an officer, and I have awarded you the Distinguished Service Cross and congratulate you."

Three of the group were awarded posthumously, while the others went to eight officers and 21 non-commissioned officers and men.

The men honored today are Captains Randolph Zane, Lieut. James M. B. Sellers, P. H. Harley, James F. Robertson, Charles Murray, William Moore, Frederick C. Echeen, Sergeant Major John H. Quick, Corporal Raymond W. Boones, Harry B. Fletcher, Ray W. Chase, Frank A. Vial, Fred W. Hill, Joseph A. Garges, Benjamin Tilgham and Howard Child.

Acts of gallantry in fighting at Bouresches and in the woods of American trenches (Bellevue) on Chateau Thierry have been recognized by General Pershing with the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to 32 officers and enlisted men of the marine corps.

General Diaz has been equally successful and his capture of prisoners since last Saturday is now well over 4,800. The Italians continue to press forward the mouth of the Piave, and rapidly are driving the Austrians back to the line of the old river bed.

Independence day on American section passed off with only normal activity. It there was any anticipation the Germans might seize the 4th of July as a day on which to strike a blow against the Americans they did not.

GAINS CONTINUED.—Harassing of the German line in the west shows no sign of letting up and the allies continue to bring in large batches of German prisoners. The game of striking the enemy a solid blow on a small sector now has been taken up on the British front and advances of the new allied position.

Between the Oise and Aisne, where the late French blow gained considerable ground and more than 100 prisoners were taken, the Germans have been attempting a counter thrust. Here also the artillery has been the only means of retaliation for ground and prisoners lost.

CRACK.—The Germans have given up their counter attack and heavy gun fire against the new American position west Chateau Thierry, but are bombarding the village of St. Elier, a little south of Aisne, gained by the French Tuesday.

In the thrust south of the Somme the allies recaptured the village of Hamel and the Hamel and Vaux woods south of the village. The woods are on high ground. The French gains at Aisne also takes elevation from the Germans. Allies pressed 500 yards on a front of 1,500 yards.

FRENCH PAPERS USE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, July 5.—President Wilson's Independence Day address at Mt. Vernon, printed with great prominence by all the newspapers. Some of them singled out special phrases to display as slogans in the heaviest type at the top of the front page. The amount of space devoted to the celebration in France, England and America averaging ten to twelve columns oblige most of editorial writers to postpone until tomorrow comment on the speech.

Croaking of Frogs Assisted Germans to Bring Up Guns

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Amsterdam, July 5.—Karl Rosner, a newspaper correspondent, who is frequently termed the German Emperor's press agent, described in the Lokal Anzeiger a conversation which he says took place between Emperor William and the German crown prince, in which the son told his father a story of the "Frogs at the battle of Chemin des Dames."

"The story was told," Rosner said, "as father and son stood on a hill in the battle sector of the army ground of General von Francois in June 3. The crown prince said, 'It took when the Germans were preparing to storm the Chemin des Dames the Frogs, which were found in millions in the marshy Allette region, croaked in such a deafening fashion that they enabled the Germans to bring up batteries, ammunition and columns without discovery, and when the attack was actually launched the deafening concert of the Frogs prevented the enemy from discovering the position of the German machine guns.'"

Wisconsin Facing Serious Famine in Skilled Farm Labor

Madison, Wis., July 5.—Wisconsin faces a famine in farm labor, and at the most critical time of the season for the crop.

The man who used to work on a farm, the man who is physically able to do so even if he lacks experience and the man who can give a few weeks or weeks to farm labor now will be doing something really worth while for his country.

During July, Wisconsin is to send 19,000 men into the national army, and of these it is estimated that at least 5,000 will come direct from the busy fields on the farms. Labor which has been the mainstay of the farmer during the present season, with help scarce, is to be taken away, and it must be replaced.

The 1918 crop on Wisconsin farms, the most promising for years because of the good weather conditions and the increase of war time acreage, is in danger. The Wisconsin farmer has labored under difficulties since war was declared, but the recent draft places him in a position where he must help.

For this reason the state is as necessary in the war time program as the manufacture of munitions, and its record must not be lowered. Wisconsin has had experience in farm work, no matter what your work now, you will be invaluable in this emergency. A few days on the farm will back your civilian life up. If you are middle-aged you cannot hope to be a one hundred per cent farm hand, but your experience will aid you and you can do a great work by doing the best you know how.

If you are fresh from the farm or have been away from it but a few years you can take the place of the best who have been called to the colors. Wisconsin calls you now, just as she is calling the men who are to do the fighting in France, and you cannot afford to neglect this call. If you have a mile for farm work, change them. Spend your two weeks or a month, or at least a part of it on the farm. You will benefit physically, and you will be contributing something toward winning the war which cannot be overestimated.

Enroll your name with the county council of defense at once. Say when you can do your bit. Your day's work may send a company of the men in France over the top with full stomachs and 100 per cent morale.

Today Secretary of Defense sent to each county council the information regarding this situation, with suggestions for meeting it. Until the 15th of July the council will be one of the most important duties of the county councils.

Orders will be issued to local draft boards to list men who are to be taken from the farms so that men can be sent to take their places.

The situation is acute, and must be met quickly. For this reason active and immediate co-operation will be asked of every county council and the state council will take every step to assist the members.

PEACE WITH HONOR DEAD OF GERMANY

BERLIN NEWSPAPERS CLAIM THAT THE DESIRE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE IS FOR A SPEEDY PEACE WITH HONOR.

MISS RAW MATERIALS

Article Claims That German People Are Not Inclined to Let That Raw Materials From Overseas Are Greatly Missed.

Amsterdam, July 5.—In a leading article the socialist newspaper

Voorwaerts of Berlin declared the desire of the German people for a speedy peace with honor is so strong that a sensible accommodation from the other side would be bound to lead to its realization.

"Our enemy today," continues the newspaper, "have the opportunity of obtaining a peace not prescribed by the war map but based on the equisense of the military and economic forces on both sides."

Policy of Truth.

"The policy of truth demanded by Philip Scheidemann, socialist leader, required an admission. The economic forces of the German people are not inclined to let that raw material is being increasingly felt.

"The conclusion of peace thus corresponds to the interests of our adversary in the same degree as our own."

Forty Millions in Paper Money Issued by Bolshevik Power

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Moscow, July 5.—The amount of paper money issued by the Bolshevik government and now in circulation aggregates forty million rubles. Since the declaration by Premier Lenin a month ago that new money would be issued and the old money would be recalled, plans for financial reform have laid apparently dormant, as no steps have been announced to provide the taxation recommended by Lenin, and the money presses are still turning out paper money.

A statement of the financial department published in the Izvestia says the latest report shows the treasury and national banks aggregate thirty million rubles.

LARGE NUMBER OF INDIANS IN SERVICE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 5.—The original American Indians in the military service and the Red Cross with an enthusiasm unsurpassed by their white brethren and pouring out their treasure for the subscription to Liberty loans, the Indians are doing their share with fine courage which gives more illustration of the incapacity of the German mind for computing the bond between races when engaged in a fight for freedom.

Subscriptions by Indians to the Liberty loans have totaled nearly $13,000,000, according to figures compiled by Cato Sells, Commissioner of Indian Affairs. That is a per capita subscription of about $4 for the Indians in the United States. Adults and minors have been about equally represented among the subscribers.

The number of Indians in the military service probably is more than 5,000. Mr. Sells is having a complete record of their participation in the great war. About 2,200 of the total have been enlisted in the military service, 1,800 in the army, 200 in the navy and 100 in other military work. Their willingness to bear their share of the hardships and dangers of the war is evidenced by the fact that 1,600 of those classified volunteered for service, while 600 were drafted—probably a greater percentage of volunteers than can be shown by any other of the numerous races represented in the United States.

As a soldier the Indian makes good with a rush. Indian schools, which are maintained by the government, have military drill, almost without exception, and to preliminary training in military life, the young Indian soldier is accustomed. One Indian school has a service flag with 150 stars, all but 15 representing volunteer enlistments. Another school has a flag with 175 stars.

KAISER'S DEFEAT WILL BE BEFORE EXPECTED

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]

Los Angeles, July 5.—"Kaiser Wilhelm's dream is already shattered. He hoped for a new East empire in Mesopotamia. He expected to occupy Asia Minor and have world dominion through this source. However, he reckoned without the aid of the divinity of world."

So declared Lieutenant Colonel J. L. Wardlaw Milne, of the Indian defense force, who is visiting in Los Angeles. He is a member of the British Indian school. "The Turk is more of a man than the average German."

"The Turk," said Colonel Milne, "has not committed the fearful atrocities that marked the war in Belgium and France of the Germans."

Until recently Colonel Milne was in charge of the British garrison at Bombay.

"All of Mesopotamia," said Colonel Milne, "is mined and thousands of troops are in battle, fighting as fiercely as on the western front. We have endured every hardship in the trenches that the men have in France. Indian troops are fighting shoulder to shoulder with the British and I want to say that there is no better fighters in the world than these men."

"The Kaiser is licked." The people of Mesopotamia know it. He has shot his bolt so far as Mesopotamia is concerned, and it is only a question of time until his troops are "licked to a frazzle" on the western front. And this defeat is coming sooner than most people expect."

Italian Army Headquarters, July 5.—Five American aviators attached to the American army were decorated by King Victor Emmanuel. The decorations were bestowed during a ceremony in the presence of General Evans, United States head of the military mission to Italy. The aviators decorated were Lieutenant Archibald Frost, Lieutenant John Park Raymond Baldwin, Kenneth Collins, and John Galchous. The crosses were given for carrying out the greater number of bombing raids during the recent Austrian offensive.

The king also visited an American Red Cross work room and thanked the workers for the help given recently to wounded soldiers.

Townley Freed on Charge of Talking Against Enlisting

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

St. Paul, July 5.—The Minnesota supreme court has today freed Townley, president of the non-partisan league, and Joseph Guilbert, league organizer, did not violate any state law by circulating certain literature, which referred to the war.

The supreme court, referring to the circulation of non-partisan league resolution, said: "These resolutions taken as a whole, appear to be nothing more serious than a somewhat sharp attack upon the government, and certain class of citizens are entitled to join an organization, whose avowed purpose is the amelioration of alleged evil of present economic conditions. The publication of these resolutions does not violate the statute in question."

It is perhaps not out of place to say the resolutions have not attracted the attention of the legal authorities. After Townley and Guilbert were indicted in Martin county, they fled, Demure, alleging the facts in the case did not constitute a violation of any state law.

The Demure was overruled and the question was certified to State Supreme Court Justice J. A. Quinn, who wrote the opinion which today reversed the order of the lower court.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS ARE RETURNING FROM FRANCE

Washington, July 5.—The list of casualties from the American Army fighting in France is now being balanced by the return of the wounded, whose numbers in the reconstruction centers like Walter Reed hospital here have reached an appreciable total.

It is an outstanding fact that all services of the American man of war, smashed by a shell, bomb or hand grenade, is notwithstanding, exactly the same kind of an individual, he is before he went in. Highly educated, mischievous, all personal loss, discomfited and humanly anxious to resume any dull round of civilian labor, they have a tendency to neglect the military police school for re-educating them to usefulness with the same distaste that the healthy has for the training establishments, however desirable he may know them to be.

So a chance visitor to the hospital expecting to discover a hero, is apt to find a proposition to the whole cloth, having been taken away from them to compel them to stay near their beds. They are likely to be calculating intelligently their chances to escape before he went in. Highly educated, mischievous, all personal loss, discomfited and humanly anxious to resume any dull round of civilian labor, they have a tendency to neglect the military police school for re-educating them to usefulness with the same distaste that the healthy has for the training establishments, however desirable he may know them to be.

It is requiring a continuation of patience and persistence to work out on this material, the far-sighted plans for teaching the maimed man a new and productive trade. The massage, hydrotherapy, and electric treatment to restore wasted muscle and shrunken limbs are regarded as splendid, but the military police school and a good deal of miscellaneous business in Wisconsin.

Saul of Tarsus.

Saul of Tarsus, known as Paul after his conversion, referring to himself (II Cor. 10:11), says "his bodily presence is weak and his speech is contemptible." Ernest Renan, the French writer, after consulting Jewish and Roman writings, says of him: "Paul was small in size, and his personal appearance did not correspond with the greatness of his soul. He was ugly, short, stout and stooping, and his broad shoulders awkwardly sustained a little bald head. His snout countenance was half hidden in a thick beard; his nose was aquiline, his eyes piercing, and his eyebrows heavy and joined across his forehead. His constitution was not healthy, though at the same time its endurance was proved by the way in which he supported an existence full of fatigues and sufferings."

Roger Bacon's Speculum.

The camera obscura, prototype of the photographic camera of today, is said to have been known to Roger Bacon—who lived in the thirteenth century. By some authorities he is even being credited with its invention, says James Thomson in Photo-Era.

The "speculum" of Roger Bacon, however, may have been simply of the order of the "hazy-bodies" commonly employed in some continental European countries, and not unknown in Philadelphia, where in old parts of the city they may be seen in use almost any day.

The "hazy-body" is a mirror fastened outside of a window at such an angle as to reflect the view up the street.

"Yes, they buy 'em too small and then they have to slip 'em off to rest their feet."

And there's all there was to the episode.

JANESVILLE HAS BECOME MECCA FOR DRY TOWN DRINKERS

Judge Maxfield Gives Limit to Men From Dry Towns Who Appear in Municipal Court This Morning On Charges Of Drunkenness.

Despite the many warnings that have been issued by Judge Maxfield to men from dry towns coming to this city to get drunk three of them appeared before the Judge this morning and just to show them that he was not kidding when he issued the warnings he gave them the limit.

Andy Bennett, a Broadhead hotel owner was the first to answer the call this morning. Andy claimed that he was in Beloit visiting a friend and that he came to Janesville to return to Broadhead. He was given twenty-five dollars and costs or thirty days in jail. He chose the latter.

Beloit couldn't resist coming to a wet town on the 4th of July and his little trip cost him twenty-five dollars and costs this morning.

Judge Maxfield gave a severe lecture this morning by Judge Maxfield for being drunk. Schultz is employed by the Janesville Traction Co. as watchman at the railroad crossing on North Academy street and Mr. Murphy of the car company stated that he was unable to realize what he was doing yesterday as he was too drunk.

Judge Maxfield scored him severely for getting drunk when he was engaged to protect the lives of the public. He was given a fine of twenty-five dollars and costs or thirty days in jail. He chose the latter.

Ormsby was questioned by Judge Maxfield, but claimed that he had been working. He entered a plea of not guilty and was told to report back for trial tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

DR. DAVID ROBERTS GIVEN A YEAR IN WORK HOUSE

Dr. David Roberts, Waukegan, veterinarian, charged with driving the trial of Grace Lusk, was found guilty in district court in Milwaukee on the charge of committing a statutory offense, and was sentenced to one year in the house of correction.

Attorney Ray Cannon, in asking for leniency for the convicted man, asked that a money fine be imposed.

The court, however, refused to grant an appeal to municipal court. He was given until Friday morning.

Dr. Roberts was arrested on the charge of driving a motor car without a license, and was held in the city jail.

Dr. Roberts was placed on the stand in his own defense under a cross-examination of the district attorney, admitted that he had registered on the two dates with Grace Lusk, and that he had driven the car on those dates.

Many-Sided Missionary.

A missionary in India gives some idea of the multiplicity of a missionary's duties. He tells us that he is a minister of the Gospel, preaching whenever possible. A medical man with a large practice. A schoolmaster with 30 to 40 small schools under his supervision. A magistrate for the settlement of local disputes, the nearest government official being 80 miles away. A road contractor, being responsible for the upkeep and repair of 50 miles of public roads. A tree planter. (This and the last office are means of providing employment for the unemployed.) A builder, attending to the erection of his own churches and hospitals. A meteorologist, reaching and reporting the rainfall at the request of the government. A money-lender and the supervisor of a local agricultural bank. A literary man, translator and revisor. A colporteur. A seller of soap and tea, to raise money for missionary purposes.

EXAMINE YOUR INNER SELF

Possibly There May Be Machinery There That Can Be Utilized to Good Purpose.

Strange forces give men purpose and jar them into action. Love, pride, sorrow, fear—all sorts of hidden feelings are responsible for the shaking of men out of ruts and into fields of undreamed-of achievement. More than one big success finds its real origin in the personal disappointment of some man—perhaps over a college education he couldn't get, or a toy he couldn't afford, or a trip he was not able to make. Of course some men are downed by such emotions, but others are made by them.

Most men have perfectly good boilers in them, and fine equipment. But so many never get up steam and go anywhere. They don't want to go anywhere. They just stand still, waiting for a call from within to "get a move on." The call is likely to come any time. If your call is late in coming, why not ring up your inner self and ask him if he can't think of some place he would like to go? It's a shame to have all that expensive machinery and not use it.—American Magazine.

EMERSON FELT WAR'S PINCH

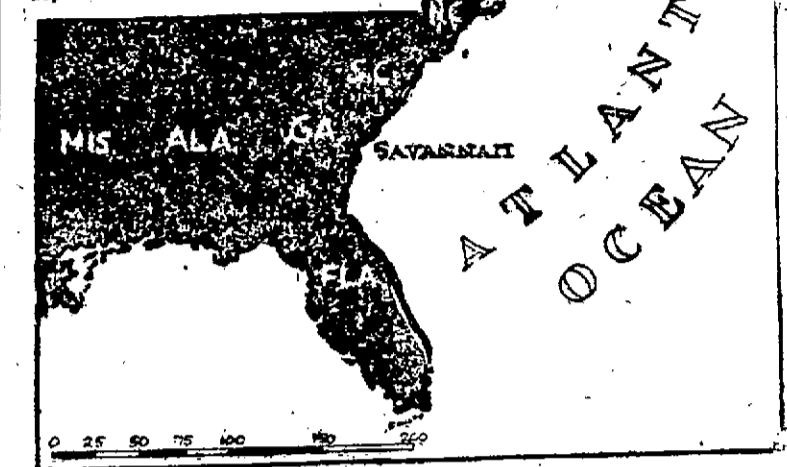

Letter Written by Him Tells of Bad Conditions in New York in the Year 1862.

It is interesting to go back to the early days of the Civil war in this city, when Emerson wrote to a friend of the financial crisis:

"The 1st of January (1862) has found me in quite as poor a plight as the rest of the Americans. Not a penny from my books since last June, which usually yield five or six hundred a year; no dividends from the banks or from Lidian's Plymouth property. Then almost all income from lectures has quite ceased, so that your letter found me in a study how to pay three or four hundred dollars with fifty. Meanwhile we are trying to be as unconsumptive as candles under an extinguisher, and 'tis frightful to think how many rivals we have in distress and in economy. But far better that this grinding should go on, bad and worse than we be driven by any impatience into a hasty peace, or any peace restoring the old rottenness."—New York World.

This map shows stretch of Atlantic coast line of U. S., where German U-boats sunk American ships. Cross 1 indicates where survivors of Winneconne, Hauppauge, Isabel B. Wiley, Hattie Dunn and Edna were picked up after those boats had been sunk. Cross 2 is where steamer Edward H. Cole was sunk. Cross 3 shows where steamer Carolina, carrying 350 persons all told, was torpedoed. Government aviator reported seeing lifeboats loaded with survivors at spot marked by cross 4. Cross 5 indicates where Herbert L. Pratt, oil tank steamer, was sunk. The details of the sinking of several other boats have not been disclosed by the war department.

Confidence Has No Envy.

Ambition doesn't fear to admire what it would like to have. Show bigness in any guise to a brave, bold man and he'll prepare to parallel it. It's the cowardly, double-swept weakling with secretly accepted bounds who always hates the strength and merit beyond reach.

The fox didn't believe the grapes sour until he had quit trying for them. Scourious tongues are bitter with self-surrender. Stern, determined men refuse to discount the future; no attainment is beyond their hopes. They never "knock." It might be construed as evidence of inability to prove equality. Confidence has no envy.

ENGLAND CARRIES ON.

Just how England and English industries are holding their own in this strenuous war is told in an eastern publication in the following article:

"For the first time, since the defeat of Napoleon, Great Britain is doing her best. She has given 8,000,000 men and women to war and the work of war."

"To equal this effort, the United States must detach at least 17,000,000 men and women from the arts of peace and dedicate them to the task of discerning Germany."

"One-half of the workers have been sent from their work, yet the work is going on. Not one newspaper or magazine has ceased publication, except one which was started during the war and whose editor was suddenly found to be an Austrian."

"Not one manufacturer of any size has closed his works. Not one retail shop of any size has been unable to pay its debts."

"Not one railroad has ceased to run regular trains or to accept freight. Not one bank or insurance company has broken down under the additional burden of the war."

"England is carrying on—that is one of the most dramatic facts in this Master-land of the world."

"And mind you—there is no spirit of desperation in England; as there is in France. There is nothing frantic. There is no rage and fury."

"There is still horse-racing at Newmarket. There are still sales of blouses and linens. There is still grand opera—two companies at present in London playing Faust and Mignon and Il Trovatore and the rest, as usual. Also, there are nine American plays, mostly farces, in the theaters of London."

"The Bank of England is not a white shambler. If that were possible, its rumors still wear pink coats and scarlet tails. And just recently the grand old bank paid out £50,000,000 in war loan dividends."

"A small number of securities are being sold. Mexicans are firmer, because of the lack of news from that troubled region. Even brewery shares are firmer, in spite of the threat of government ownership, which is not taken seriously."

"There is still golf, although half of the golf links have been taken for allotments. There is still football, baseball, too; every Saturday. There are now four Canadian and four American baseball teams in London, who play to wondering crowds of ten thousands or more."

"There is plenty of food and the rationing system has become a routine. It is no longer the main target for British jesters."

"In a word, England has become accustomed to the duties and the horrors of war. It has entirely got past opinions and into facts."

"It has no heart for either optimism or pessimism. Both seem childish. It is neither enthusiastic nor depressed. It has no fears and no delusions."

"England has learned how to adapt herself to changing conditions. She has ceased to fear the things that are new. She is even talking of adopting a new decimalized coinage."

"A new England has arrived. Make no mistake about that. The old Victorian England has come forever, and will never come back."

A SANE FOURTH.

Janesville commemorated a genuinely 'sane fourth.' Thursday. There was patriotic music in the morning and in the afternoon one of the more genuine displays of patriotism was introduced in the city with the school children as the principals, that has not been enacted in Janesville for many, many a year. It was from the heart and soul of the people and one demonstration of the nation's birthday that will be long remembered. The committee in charge are to be congratulated on its success.

But few fire crackers were fired, the preliminary discharge of torpedoes in the few days preceding the Fourth, the fire balloons, a scattered display of Roman candles and a few sky-rockets told the youth of yesterday, those boys not yet in the war, that this was the Fourth. It was a sane Fourth and the city can well be proud of the results obtained.

However, one thing was demonstrated that impressed itself upon the minds of a large majority of the citizens. That is, the place where the permanent bandstand in the Court House park should be placed. If you wish for ideal surroundings, a natural amphitheatre, with plenty of places for the public to sit and enjoy the band music of evening concerts, or listen to addresses by public speakers, the upper end of the park is the ideal location.

The stand erected there for Thursday's activities, capable of seating all the band and the speakers, as well as a chorus, demonstrates the fact that this stand should be made permanent and the future concerts, at least for the coming few months, be held there. Later the city council may decide on another location for a permanent stand for such purposes, but the demonstration Thursday would lead the average citizen to believe the ideal location has been discovered.

PROFITTEERING SPIRIT.

The Congressional military affairs committee is about to investigate alleged scandals in aircraft production. There is going to be a determined attempt to clean profiteering in all parts of the war work. Any people who are trying to fatten themselves will have a lively time before they get through.

Many of these people would indignantly deny that they were doing anything dishonorable. They claim that the government is not compelled to buy of them, and that if the government is not satisfied with their price, it can go somewhere else.

If a man's house was afire, he would pay a very high price for a ladder so he could get up on the roof and throw some water. He might better afford to pay $100 for the ladder rather than not have it.

The neighbor could not justify himself for refusing the ladder if the owner of the burning building would not pay $100 for it. It would be no excuse to say that if he was dissatisfied with the terms, he could look for some other ladder. Public sentiment would tell him to loan the ladder freely and gladly, and not charge a cent for it.

The illustration is not just parallel, for producers usually depend on their work for their living, and are entitled to a fair price. No one complains when a producer simply asks a fair interest return on the money. Some producers, however, have been generous enough to give the government the use of their plants asking no money return for themselves. The country appreciates their fine spirit.

The man who deliberately soaks the government is too contemptible for words to express. If his neighbors fully realized they would scarcely care to speak to him on the street.

This is the time when provision men usually give orders for canned goods. This year it is said in most cases no orders for these goods are being accepted. The government has taken over most of the canneries. The public can not be sure just how much of these products will be available.

Labor is costing very high on the farms. While a heavy wheat crop is assured, corn is still uncertain. The farmer may not get help enough to raise the usual vegetables. The principal dependence of the American people for vegetables this year will be on their own back yards.

The garden will be only a half success if products that come all in a heap are allowed to waste. Every gardener should can all that can not be eaten when it matures. With a long row of preserved products in the cellar, a household can laugh at labor and food speculators.

From the way those United States marines went ahead the other day, it may possibly have penetrated to Mr. Hindenburg's cranium that there may be a thing or two doing by the time a million of those fellows get into the trenches.

It is not perhaps surprising that the American people don't accomplish more, when they pay a moving picture comedian ten times the salary they give the president of the United States.

Some of the people who criticize the war work so much could use their tongues to better advantage licking war savings stamps.

The old smokers can't stand soft drinks, as they give them no excuse for not getting to work promptly on Monday morning.

Having contributed money to the hospitals, some motorists think they are free to run down as many people as they want to.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

THE PETTY PLANS. A neighbor's house was burning down; the fire was intense; the flames were spitting towards the sky, the clouds of smoke were dense;

And many ran to share the light, but one looked down the street, And said: "My supper's ready, now, and I'll stay here and eat."

The world is now ablaze with hate, the skies with fire are red; The fields of France today are strewn with young and manly dead;

And yet I heard a man complain that he was asked to eat His share of sacrificial bread to give the warriors wheat.

And I have heard a man demur, when called upon to aid, That it would interfere with some pet pleasure-plan he'd made;

Have heard one say, in time like this, with all the world at grip, That he would not deny himself a simple fishing trip!

Oh, petty men, forget yourselves! This is life's biggest age. The greatest drama of all times is now upon the stage!

Big deeds are claiming big men, here, with victory at stake; Big thoughts must occupy men's minds and petty plans must break.

Total Resources. Milwaukee.—The total resources of the Milwaukee national banks showed a gratifying increase during the last two months. On the returns made under the call issued by the controller of the currency on Wednesday for a report of business at the close of June 28, the total resources of the five national banks were shown to have increased since the last call, $3,795,000. Loans increased heavily while deposits showed a small falling off and cash resources increased slightly.

Marines manning anti-aircraft gun on U. S. coast.

According to the statement of a German submarine commander the next real visit of the Germans to the U. S. will be as a combination submarine and airplane raid, some time in July. A warm greeting awaits the submarines and planes. The picture shows one of the powerful anti-aircraft guns which line the Atlantic coast and are manned by marines. The crew is seen operating the gun during target practice.

As Will of Avon said: "What's in a name?" Mr. Jolly is an undertaker at Oil City, Pa.

THOSE TALL SILK HATS. It is difficult for any man, even a governor, to wear a silk hat and milk a cow at the same time. To milk a cow one has to be quite near the source of supply. Note the following item from the Dairy Exposition:

"The governor was asked to try his hand at milking, and he expressed the wish that he would, but the governor's hat was in the way, and he didn't even make an attempt."

A very excited contributor, who is all hot up or something, says: "We willingly obey Mr. Hoover's request to eat other grains in place of wheat. Immediately we find the price of other grains rising above that of wheat. White flour (wheat) can be bought today for $5.25 per hundred pounds. The cost per hundred pounds for cornmeal, rye flour, potato flour and rice flour is $7.85, $11 and $11.50 respectively. Why is this so?"

If we could answer questions like that, we wouldn't be writing a column. We would own a raiding mine.

"WORK OR FIGHT." Now that the war department has issued a new slogan, "Work or Fight," and will requisition all young men of draft age, we hope the following will not be overlooked:

Lounge liards. Movie actresses' husbands. Taxicab drivers. Floorwalkers in corset stores. Jazz band musicians. Train butchers. Tennis chroniclers. Bush leaguers.

Trade report says the price of baby cabs is going up in the near future, and nobody can tell how high. There may be an actual famine in them.

But why worry? Every neighbor has an old one in the attic and there isn't much call for them nowadays, anyhow.

Saams like there is nothing like bad news. Report from Belgium is to the effect that an attempt on the lives of Hindenburg and Ludendorff failed.

CITY OF FILTH AND MISERY

Bagdad Has Fallen Far From Proud Position She Is Said to Have Occupied in the Past.

Bagdad is glorious only by reflection from the past. The houses of the present town are crude constructions of brick, mostly from ancient ruins and adobe; living is primitive; sanitation is non-existent; the streets or rather lanes, so narrow at times that one beast of burden fills the whole space from blank wall to blank wall, are sewers and rubbish heaps, and the reservoir for water supply is the Tigris river, which divides the city into two parts, just where all the filth of the city's lanes pours into it. In the business sections, the bazaars, the streets are roofed over with rude screens of palm logs covered with mats and reeds as a protection against the burning heat of the summer sun.

The houses are provided with serdabs, a sort of cellar, for household resort during daytime in the long summer months, and when there is no serdab, with mats of thorny shrubs to hang before the windows and keep drenched with water. At that season the whole town sleeps and eats on the roof, and the main middle floor of the house, is practically unused. The heat of summer is intense, and everything is constructed to alleviate its discomfort, consequently one suffers miserably during the brief rainy period from the cold and damp at home and abroad. The death rate is enormous.—Dr. John P. Peters in American Review of Reviews.

ALEUT YOUNGSTERS AT PLAY Manage to Have Periods of "Fun," Much as Do the Children of More Favored Nations.

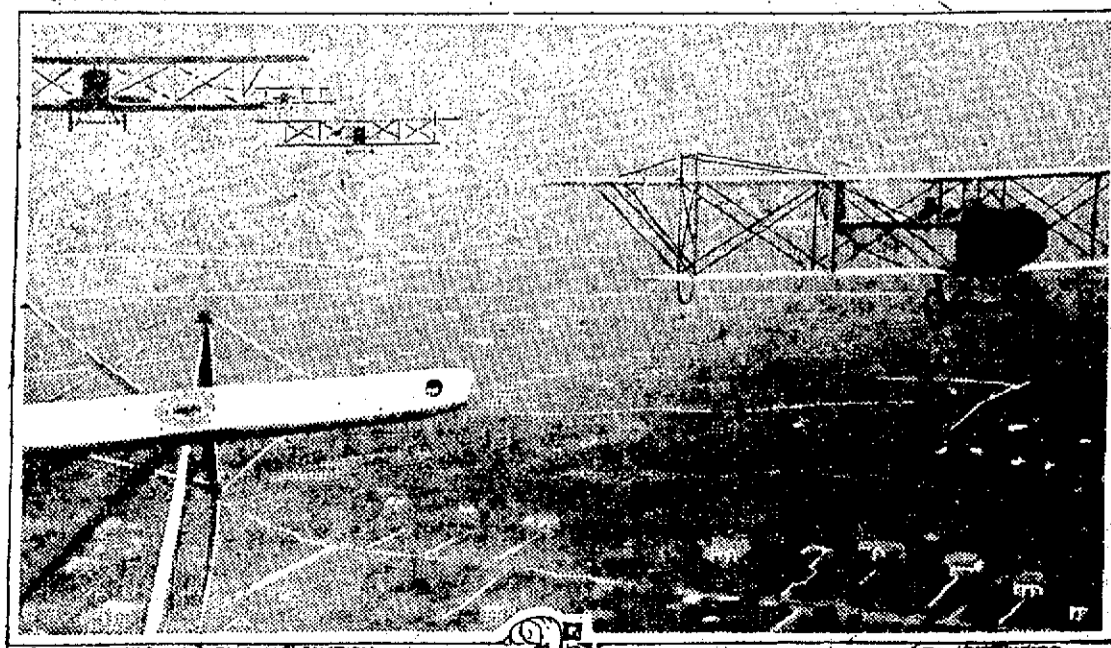

The Aleut boys and girls are very like boys and girls in the States, when you get under the furs and dirt and brown skins. They like fun as well as our children. One of them writes: "I was at Atka all last winter. I trapped two blue fox, which I am sending down to have sold for me. I also learned how to use a gun. Yesterday we went out with one of the teachers and I killed an eagle. The marshal gave me 70 cents for killing it because, he said, I was a girl."

Picking mullins (large raspberries) is a favorite occupation. The bushes grow on the side of the mountain, and to pick the berries one must either sit down and dig his heels into the bank or lie down and hang on with one hand. In spite of care the picker often takes an involuntary coast down the hill. Bogholes, pitfalls and mountain creeks add to the difficulties of the quest.

Clam digging is another change from home life that is welcomed by the children. They do this when, as one of the small boys said, "the tide is getting downer and downer." Salmon catching and curing is another help to the family larder.—Alice M. Guernsey in World Outlook.

Clean out the attic by getting rid of odds and ends stored there. A little classified ad will do the trick.

U. S. PERDMEN ARE LEARNING HOW TO FLY OVER BERLIN

U. S. airplanes flying in V formation at Kelly field, San Antonio, Texas.

Young American birdmen are perfecting themselves in their art set as their goal a flight over the city of Berlin. The accompanying picture shows how an American flying squadron may some day circle over the government buildings in the German capital. The airplane's value for observation purposes is demonstrated by the photo, the ground, houses and roadways being clearly distinguishable.

Barrel the Only Rolling Container. A barrel can be rolled. This is its greatest merit. Every other shape of container which weighs over 100 pounds when filled must be lifted bodily and carried on a hand truck or by hoisting machinery. One man can unload a carload of sugar—200 barrels of it—in less than an hour.

MISS NELLIE DONAHUE DROWNED AT ROCKFORD

POPULAR JANESVILLE YOUNG LADY AND SERGT. VERNON CHRISTY OF PEORIA LOSE THEIR LIVES WHEN BOAT CAPSIZES.

MISS F. OLSON SAVED

Miss Olson and Private McMann Saved After Hard Struggle in Water—Body Recovered Shortly After Accident.

Miss Nellie Donahue, nineteen years of age, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donahue, 603 Chestnut street, was drowned, and Sergeant Vernon Roy Christy of Peoria lost his life in trying to save Miss Donahue when a row boat in which they were riding was tipped over in Rock river at Love's park at Rockford last evening about 7:30 o'clock.

Private C. E. McMann and Miss Florence Olson of Monroe, who is living in this city at the present time, were also in the boat, but were saved. Hundreds of pleasure seekers at the park witnessed the drowning, but were unable to reach the victims in time.

Miss Donahue, accompanied by Miss Olson, left this city yesterday morning to spend the Fourth in Rockford. Both young ladies spent the day in the city and went out to the park late in the afternoon.

Reports claim that Sergeant Christy attempted to change his seat in the boat and in so doing the boat capsized. The four young people were thrown in the river and the two soldiers immediately attempted to save the girls.

Private McMann, a very good swimmer, succeeded in rescuing Miss Olson after she had gone down for the second time. Sergeant Christy put up a game battle and did all possible to save the life of Miss Donahue. He became exhausted from his efforts and seeing that he was tiring he made a last effort to save his lady companion, but it was fruitless and they sank together.

Those gathered on the shore and boats were put out but the young couple had disappeared below the surface of the water before any aid could reach them. The bodies of the young people were recovered less than half an hour after the accident occurred.

Miss Donahue was well known in this city. She was employed by the Hough Shade corporation. Her body was brought to this city from Rockford this morning. Sergeant Christy was sent to Camp Grant from Board No. 1, Peoria, last May and was to have been transferred to Camp Custer, but in place was appointed a sergeant and retained at Camp Grant. It is said that he has a sister, Helen, living in Omaha.

Miss Donahue leaves to mourn her loss, besides her parents, one sister, Virginia, and one brother, Edward. Her death is a great loss to the family.

Notice of the funeral will be given later.

CITY HAS A "FIRELESS" DAY ON QUIET FOURTH

For the first time in many years the local fire department had a day of rest on the Fourth of July. Not a call was put in at any of the stations and the city's fire fighters had a quiet time of it yesterday. Alarms are usually numerous on the "Glorious Fourth" and have been so in the past years, mostly due to the use of fireworks, but the celebration in this respect could not compare with the day of past years. Not an accident due to explosives was reported in the city.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Barbara Blunk. A large number of sorrowing friends and relatives gathered for the last sad rites for the late Mrs. Barbara Blunk, at the home, 235 North Jackson street, yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The home was crowded with friends and the floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

The services were conducted by the Rev. J. A. Melrose, of the First Presbyterian church. The pallbearers were all nephews of the deceased: Frank Blunk of Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. John Dyer of Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Siebekorn of Beloit; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Selmore of Hanover, Wis.; Will Siebekorn of Wau-pun, Wis.; and Mrs. Mary Dettloff of Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The funeral of the late Fred J. Baker was held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home, 332 Mineral Point avenue. Due to an error the funeral was announced in Wednesday's issue, to be held on Friday. The services at the home were conducted by the Rev. R. G. Pierson. The Janesville lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks had charge of the services at the grave. The pallbearers were F. S. Baines, D. L. Myers, T. G. Murphy, F. C. Grant, B. W. Brewer and H. J. Brock. Interment was in Oak Hill cemetery.

Where He Fell Down.

Recently an American was showing an English friend about the capital. "Our government is very economical," said the American. "When we've an extra thick fog they suck it into a big clarn and convert it into paint for warships and buildings."

"Really?" said the Britisher. "Talking about fogs reminds me that my brother invented a machine for compressing fogs into bricks, and one thick November day he turned out enough material to build a country house."

"Yes, he did. He moved into this new house the next April and was a happy man for two weeks, until one morning he found himself, also his family, lying out on the cold, damp ground, in company with some bits of furniture and some miscellaneous joinery. The house had gone, but it was the thickest morning ever seen in those parts. Of course, you can guess what had happened. In the night those fog bricks had somehow got back into their original element."

"Well," drawled the Yankee, "I reckon yer relt've ought to have gazed those bricks."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Melting Aluminum Chips.

Fine aluminum chips, such as are produced in the machining of the aluminum alloys used in motorcar construction are hard to remelt without excessive loss, a loss of 40 per cent being common. According to the bureau of mines, the total loss from this cause throughout the country amounts, with aluminum at its present price, at $600,000. The bureau has recently published some valuable suggestions for minimizing this loss. The main cause of trouble seems to be the lack of ready coalescence of the metallic globules, and this means that the problem is one of colloid chemistry applied to metals.—Scientific American.

Searchlight from Batteries.

From the pocket flashlight operated by two or three dry cells of minute size the battery searchlight has been steadily improved until today remarkable results are obtained. A battery searchlight has been introduced with a range of 2,000 feet up to half a mile, operated on six volts. Equipped with a 7 1/2-inch adjustable focus, single-shell reflector, on a recent photometer test one of these searchlights gave 458,000 candlepower. The combination of a nitrogen-filled tungsten lamp and a correctly designed reflector has worked wonders for the battery operated searchlight.

Very Little Escaped Taxation.

The names of more than 150 different taxes imposed on the Egyptians of the Roman period have been learned from papyrus. Besides the poll tax, they include taxes on exports and imports, on animals, on business transactions, such as sales and mortgages, imposts for the benefit of the government and its officials, from the emperor downward, who took his bakhshish in the form of a national offering, at his accession. When one further considers the other burdens to which property was liable, the imposition of public duties and the discharge of costly municipal functions, the wonder is that there was anything left to tax.

GERMAN EFFORTS LAST THREE MONTHS HAVE BEEN WASTED. EXPERTS BELIEVE

Battle lines in France.

Military experts are agreed that while Germany's army achieved considerable gains in the last three months its efforts really were wasted. After three months of activity along the western front there is a temporary lull.

In the first offensive that started from Arras (1) the objective was Amiens (2). In this attack they failed to make the expected gain, being stopped between Albert (3) and Montdidier (4).

"A FISH STORY"

BY WILL SEAT.

ter in the Rev. Archibald's hum-drum existence.

The fact that he one day forgot to eat his lunch—an intelligence handed over the back fence of the neat little factory garden by his faithful housekeeper, Maggie, to Molly, the Stevensons' drawing room through the neighborhood—filled the hearts of his feminine parishioners with sympathetic concern.

The fact that the cause of the rector's preoccupation on this occasion was a good run of trout in the little hillside stream a few miles from the rectory would not have added to the clamor, and Maggie, being a woman of discretion, did not mention this fact to Molly across the fence.

One day, a fresh, mild spring day, the rector did not come in to dinner till 8 o'clock, and Maggie always had dinner ready at 6. When she asked him why he was so late as she stood at his side, as he hastily ate his soup, he looked up in surprise at her. Then he drew out his watch and whistled.

"By Jove," he exclaimed, "how the afternoon flew!" and when Maggie waited for an explanation the rector offered none.

After dishes were washed Maggie hastened to the back fence to tell Molly, but Molly had something to tell herself.

"I don't know whatever is getting into Miss Hortense," she said. "She never came in to dinner till 8 o'clock, and we always have it at 6:30. And the funny thing is that she didn't know she was late. She said she had been walking, but she didn't say who with.

Maggie looked knowingly at Molly. "I have suspected it all along," she said. "I won't say anything that isn't my affair, but I will say that the Rev. Archibald didn't come in himself till 8 and whistled when I told him he was two hours late. You can draw your own conclusions."

Maggie's suspicion was before long making its way through the parish. There was little room for doubt that Hortense and her neighbor, the rector, were much together, and there was no one in the parish who seemed to keep such a good run of church affairs as Miss Hortense, who, until the new rector had come, had been like a warm, if not a positive back-slicer.

But in spite of Hortense's interest and help, Archibald grew even more absent-minded. On one occasion he read morning prayer at Sunday vespers, and a week later he announced the hour of the ladies' missionary society as 8 o'clock in the morning in the rector's study. But such slips could be overlooked.

It was three hours before vespers on the following Sunday afternoon. Archibald was lazing in his comfortable little study and Maggie was out for the afternoon. A small boy from the country came breathless to the rectory door and between gasps explained:

"Mama sent me for the doctor and he is away for the day. Baby's got a fit and papa has gone up the river. But I guess you can help if you hurry."

In Archibald stopped long enough to reflect that vespers were not till 5 and that it was about 3 o'clock then, and that he could go straight from his visit to church.

He put the notes for his address in his coat pocket, and with admirable forethought remembered a cut-aids-to-the-injured kit from his study desk—one that he used when taking his choir boys camping.

He did not know much about fits, but still he might need it, so he put it with a roll of bandaging and a medicine case into a neat black leather bag that he used to carry his vestments to weddings and funerals.

About 15 minutes later, when Archibald had reached the small two-room cottage by the riverside, about a mile and a vigorous-lunged baby, whose "fits" proved to be merely a case of bad temper.

Archibald fixed the fire, humored the children, consoled the mother and managed to feed the baby some and yet as the poor mother begged him tearfully to stay "just a while longer," at least till the baby's father got back from the river, where he was fishing, Archibald didn't have the heart to leave.

Archibald knew that it was not a case of life and death, but still the mother's tears made it impossible for him to go. He remembered what Hortense Stevenson had told him the day before about his duty to the poor people of his parish, and he had a pleasing feeling of doing something of which she would approve as he decided to stay with the poor woman till her husband returned.

Fortunately for Archibald, the father did return in about half an hour, and after a few words of advice and good cheer and a little difficulty in collecting his scattered belongings, the young clergyman hastened toward church.

His lay reader, of course, would have begun the service, and he would still be there in time for the address. Archibald felt an exhilarating sense of being necessary as he hastened toward the church. He would slip into the vestry, quickly don his vestments and slip through the side entrance to the chancel.

The eyes of his faithful congregation would be turned toward him, he knew that—and of them all it would be the questioning, anxious eyes of Hortense that would count.

Then after services he would hurry away from the church, and not stay to answer any of the curious questionings as to what had caused his delay. He would go back to his rectory and then, after supper, he would slip over to Hortense.

Hortense would be expecting him, for it was only two days before that he had told her of his love for her, and that she had given him a properly reticent answer. He had been allowed to hope. Archibald calculated the probable effect that his story of his afternoon's experience would have upon her.

He would not make too much of it—that would be boastful—but when she asked, as of course she would, what had detained him, he would in an offhand way let her know what he had done.

Up to the time of slipping over to Hortense after supper things happened as Archibald had expected. In fact, he found Hortense dressed in the soft pink and white dress he liked so well, sitting, reading as he entered the drawing room, which the rest of the Stevensons had, with their usual consideration, seen fit to abandon at the time for his call.

Archibald hurried to her with outstretched hands, but Hortense greeted him with a cool raising of the eyebrows that took his breath away. He pulled a chair to the side of the table where she sat, and waited for her to say something.

"I hardly knew whether to expect you or not," she said with a forced laugh calculated to freeze a much more daring heart than that of Archibald Demarest.

"Hortense," said Archibald, feeling a curious chokiness, as he drew up to the foot of his dreams. He had never seen her in this mood, but he was quite unprepared for it. "I couldn't miss this, no matter how busy my day had been."

"Not," said Hortense with a rising infection. "It would perhaps be more to your credit if you felt as much devotion to vespers as you profess you feel for me."

"O, that's it, is it. Do you know, I couldn't make out what made you seem so stand-offish when I came in. That's all, isn't it, dear—dearest?"

It was rather hard in the face of Hortense's prolonged frigidity to come out with the newly permitted terms of endearment, but Archibald was making a great effort.

"I never knew until two hours before vespers and I tried to get back in time."

Hortense's eyes were bright with anger. "You needn't make any excuses," she said, drawing from his outstretched hand. "You could have been man enough."

Man enough! Why, Hortense, I thought I did the manly thing. I thought it was just the sort of thing—"

"Manly thing to come in half an hour late to vespers? A little about mindedness, I'm inexcusable—what you didn't forget? You did it on purpose? Wait till you explain! You need make no explanations, Mr. Demarest."

"It was a small matter," said Archibald, helplessly.

"A small matter to go fishing on Sunday afternoon and not to get back till vespers were half over! That was a small matter, was it?"

Archibald dropped to his knees before Hortense. "Why on earth do you think I was fishing?"

"Because you weren't clever enough to conceal the fact, I suppose."

"Hortense, Hortense," pleaded the rector. "Won't you think better of me? I went out to help a poor woman whose baby was having fits and—"

"Yes, and stopped to fish on the way home and forgot all about vespers. I am sorry, Mr. Demarest, but I would rather end our friendship here."

Hortense suddenly regained her composure and Archibald jumped to his feet as Molly came into the drawing room.

"Please, sir," she said with a smile. "Maggie just asked me over the fence, could you stop back to the rectory a minute. There is a little boy there says you must have took father's satchel of fish home by mistake. He's got your black bag with the bandages in it, and says will you please accept three of the largest trout of the catch and leave him have the rest."

As a light of understanding broke over Archibald's face Molly added in an aside to Hortense:

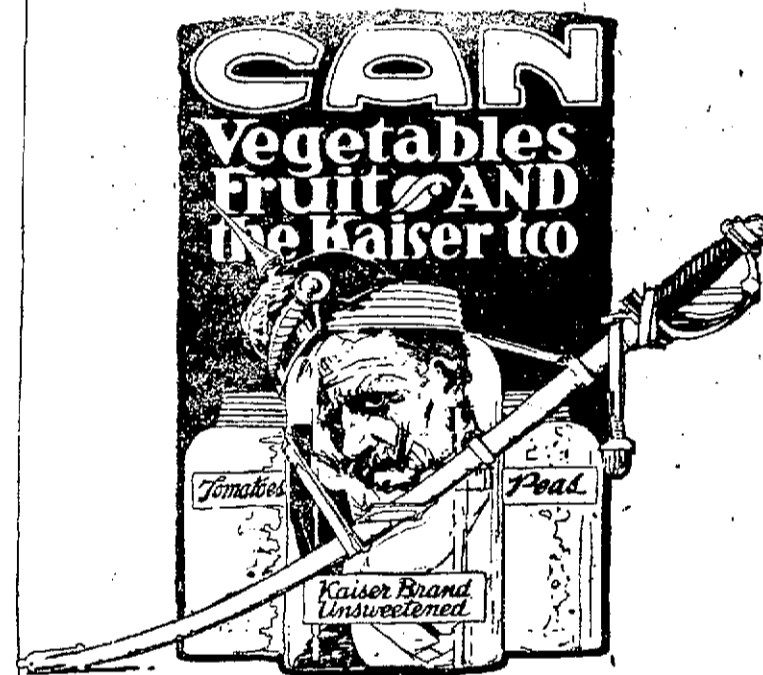

"It's all right about Mr. Demarest. He wasn't fishing at all. You see, Mr. Demarest," turning to the clergyman with a confidential air, "Maggie was sure when you brought home the bag of fish that you had been off fishing, and she told me and I told Mrs. Hortense."

"WHY HORTENSE, I THOUGHT I DID THE MANLY THING."

from the rectory, he found a scene of warm milk. Fifteen minutes before church time he made a break to leave. There were four peevish children. He could imagine what confusion a smoky fire, a tired, worn mother, his absence from church would cause,

PHILADELPHIA WAR CHEST OVERFLOWING

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Philadelphia, July 5.—This city's war chest has been filled to overflowing. The war chest plan was instituted by a few leading bankers here, who inaugurated an intensive campaign for a $25,000,000 fund. The campaign, while officially ended, is still getting belated results. It netted not only the $25,000,000 asked for, but a substantial amount besides.

The fund, through the agency of various benevolent societies, will be spent in ministering to the wants of the soldiers and sailors, who are engaged in actual warfare, and for the relief of the many women and children in foreign countries, who have been made to feel the bitter sting of a Titanic conflict.

The government provides its fighting forces with uniforms, munitions, and the other necessities for warfare, but the "little extras" must be bought by funds subscribed by individuals.

That was the purpose of the War Chest campaign here.

Welfare expresses the use to which the fund will be devoted. Through the Red Cross, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, Knights of Columbus, Young Men's Hebrew Association, the Commission on Training Camp Activities, the Salvation Army, National League for War Relief, Boy Scouts, Community Recreation Service and similar war relief activities, health, comfort, amusement and diverting things will be made available to lighten the burden of the men, who are fighting to make the country safe for democracy.

When the campaign started it was announced that the money received would eliminate further soliciting for war activities for a year. It was also made known that, in addition to extending the funds for the little "extras" for the boys on the firing line, that help would be afforded to the thousands of women and children in Belgium, France, Serbia, Poland and Armenia, who have been made homeless by the war.

Many unique posters were placed in conspicuous places throughout the city. None probably attracted so much attention, or was so effective in results, as the series labeled "32 to 33," meaning that the soldiers and sailors were giving thirty-one nights and days in fighting for their country, while the stay-at-homes were only asked to give one day's income to the war chest.

was in the name.

The strolling company were playing "Hamlet," but they were afraid that Shakespeare's great tragedy would not sufficiently attract, so they conceived the bright idea of altering the title to "How a Stepfather Was Paid Out." The result was a crowded house.—London Tit-Bits.

RUDELPH GOING GOOD DESPITE LONG SERVICE

New York, July 5.—Dick Rudolph, star pitcher of the Boston Braves, has been pitching for fourteen years, but the passing of time doesn't seem to faze him.

He started pitching for Fordham College back in 1905, and two years later he was on his way to Brooklyn as a member of the Toronto Club of the old Eastern league, after having had a bit of additional schooling with a semi-professional club at Rutland, Vt., and with New Haven in the Connecticut league.

His first full season with Toronto was a busy one. For the first time he won more games than he lost, and he was on his way to becoming a member of the Toronto Club of the old Eastern league, after having had a bit of additional schooling with a semi-professional club at Rutland, Vt., and with New Haven in the Connecticut league.

In 1911 Rudolph was given a trial by the Giants, but John McGraw did not believe he was ready for the big show and sent him back to the Toronto Club. That decision was one of the mistakes McGraw has made in his career, and he has regretted it since. For in 1913 Rudolph went to the Boston club and what he has done in the way of standing National league batters on their heads is well known to repeat here.

Rudolph was a brilliant pitcher this season and last, when he finally came to terms with the Braves and signed his contract. In his first start of the season he beat the Reds, letting Matty's team down with one hit and he proved conclusively that he has lost none of his cunning in the box. Early in the Spring he tried to purchase his release from the Braves for $10,000, but could not get the deal over. Manager Stallings knows well what he is worth.

ON FISHING THE DRY-FLY.

My Dear Buck:

Without a doubt, old scout, learning to cast the dry or floating fly is the post-graduate study in the fine art of fishing and there is more real enjoyment in coaxing the wise old trout into the creel by this method than any other angle of the sport. All the knowledge you have gained through study of the habits of the trout in your wet fly-casting stand you well as a beginner at this end of the game.

Most of our trout fishing is on streams in the woods or wilderness where the waters alternate between rapids and smooth spots, waterfall and deep pool, shallows or riffles, and one could follow a stream all day without lamplung a trout on the rise for food, and if he were fishing in the orthodox English way, bacon fried to a crisp would about make up his evening meal, which accounts for the fact that we have changed the dope a bit and fish the dry-fly more as a floating fly without the added effort of tossing the feathers into the mouth of the waiting trout and tickling him to death.

On a very civilized stream that has been fished to a fare-you-well by all manner of fishermen, where the trout have wised up to tricks of the game, the dry-fly will get a rise when the wet-fly would merely cause a wink of the weather eye.

In casting the dry-fly the fisherman works upstream, casting slightly across the current, so that the floating fly will ride down with the current, and a very essential detail is to cast lightly and accurate, while it is not necessary to cast as long a line as in wet-fly casting. The whole game is to have the fly float down as naturally as possible, and it requires considerable skill in the handling of the rod and the reeling in of slack to keep the fly from being pulled under the water by the weight of a slack line or through some other rough work of the caster.

Horizontal Cast the Best.

Wherever possible, the horizontal cast should be used in preference to the overhead cast, as the fly is more likely to land right side up with the wings cocked, although more accuracy and distance are obtained by the overhead, which is not as essential in dry-fly casting as to have the fly ride the water in a natural manner. As a general thing the fly lights on the water on its side when the overhead cast is used, and although a trout will rise to a floating fly in this position, the chances are greater for a rise when the fly lies on the water in the position naturally taken by a live insect with its wings fluttering above the water in its effort to rise from the surface.

In casting a smooth stretch of water there is little if any drag of the line, and the fly will float in an upright position if cast skillfully.

The early season when the water is high and discolored by flooded conditions the trout are bottom or mid-water feeding, and at this time the dry-fly is of little use on the streams. As soon as the air warms up a bit and the insect life has developed on the streams and the water clears with the temperature rising steadily, the floating fly is a sure winner. From the middle of May to the end of the season the conditions grow more favorable to the dry-fly, and on low, clear water at the tail end of the season it is by far the most effective lure.

On any water that is not broken by rapids or riffles, the dry-fly can be used to advantage, and even on waters that are swift and rapid it will be found effective.

One of the main points in casting the dry-fly is to study the currents, as one of the greatest little old links to the successful use of the dry-fly is the drag caused by the fly falling on water, moving at a speed different from that of the water on which the line falls. Select your casting position where the fly and line will float on water of the same speed, so that the fly will not be drowned by the drag of the line. Another point that will make your dry-fly work better at the start is to avoid raising the tip of the rod as the fly falls on the water, and this is a small point that the wet-fly fisherman has a tendency to overlook through habit acquired in casting the wet feathers. To raise the rod at this time will pull the dry fly under water. At the same time the beginner should never strip in the line until the fly has started downstream with the current. If you do it necessary to cast on waters of different speed to the current, cast a slack line, and if the fly lights on water moving slower than that on which the line rests there will be no drag on the fly until the slack line has floated downstream. Make a study of the stream and the trout and use all your skill and you will find much pleasure in floating the dry-fly.

MERKLE LIVES DOWN HIS FAMOUS BONER

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS)

New York, July 5.—The bonehead plays that players make live after them, according to the baseball oracle.

But although bonehead plays may live the players who perpetrate them may live them down, and this is just what Fred Merkle is doing—Fred Merkle is the famous episode that cost the Giants a pennant when he forgot to touch second.

As he became a veteran in the service of the Giants his playing over a stretch of six or seven years overshadowed the memory of that bonehead play and the novelty of kidding him about it wore off, though the scribes often referred to it.

Then came the season of 1916, which saw Merkle on the decline—or at least Jim McGraw thought so, for Fred was traded to the Brooklyn Dodgers for Lew McCarty and that day, August 20, 1916, was one of the blackest days of his career.

Last season Merkle bloomed out in the uniform of the Chicago Cubs, having been sold to the Weeghman combine in January of last year for a sum said to have been $2,500.

"What did the Cubs want with Merkle?" asked the fans. Merkle was through or McGraw would never have parted with him, they figured. But Merkle wasn't through. He had a fairly good season with the Cubs last year—just fairly good, mind you—and he proved to a manager Mitchell that he was still a mighty valuable ball player to have hanging around.

Today there is not a question as to Merkle's value. He is the leading slugger of the Cub machine and his playing around the initial corner for Mitchell has been an inspiration to every member of the team. Should the Cubs come through to a pennant this year, Merkle's worth will be pointed to as one of the reasons why Merkle has lived down his bonehead play. He has come back as few players ever came back and deserves no end of praise.

MORRIS MILLER

With the American league season almost half gone, Smoky Wood, one-time pitcher and now playing the sun field for the Indians, leads the American league batters in making out doubles, according to recent figures.

Wood's total of two sackers is sixteen. He has played in fifty-seven games. Harry Hooper of the Boston Red Sox has punched out fifteen twip wallops, but he has participated in sixty-three games. Tris Speaker, Joe's particular buddy, has made fourteen doubles, but Spoke has played in sixty-six games.

So we'll have to crown Smoky Joe the "Two-Base King" of the American league. In addition Joe owns one triple and three homers, to say nothing of forty singles, which in 293 times at bat gives him a rating of .295.

There was an old-timer named Hyatt. Who was usually docile and quiet. But an umpire named Lynch called him out in a pinch. And that was the cause of the riot.

Fandom is taking a new interest in the St. Louis Browns. Jimmy Burke, veteran baseball player, manager and coach, has been named to succeed Jimmy Austin, appointed temporary manager of the St. Louis Browns when Fielder Jones resigned.

The announcement came as no great surprise, as Burke, who has been coach of the St. Louis team, was always considered to have the inside track provided that Austin was not kept on the job permanently. For five years previous to joining the Browns this season Burke was coach of the Detroit Americans. He played third for the St. Louis Nationals in 1905, and spent the next few years as manager of Louisville, Kansas City, Indianapolis and other minor league clubs.

The home run record of the American league is in danger. Back in 1902 Socks Seybold of the Athletics made sixteen drives for the circuit, and this mark has successfully withstood all the attacks that have since
